

BIOGRAPHY

Sally Mackey is a principal lecturer at the Central School of Speech and Drama, University of London. She lectures in performance and applied theatre and is Deputy Head of Studies. Research interests are currently in the performance of place. In addition to undertaking practical research projects, she has contributed to journals and conferences in this field (most recently, 'Performance, place and allotments: Feast or Famine' in CTR, 17.2, 2007) and was a member of the AHRC Commissioning Panel for the recent Landscape and Environment theme (2006).